UNIT TEST – II(2025-26)

Section A Comprehension

Rohan had just moved to a new school, and he felt nervous on his first day. Everything seemed unfamiliar—the classrooms, the teachers, and the playground. At lunchtime, he sat alone, wishing he had someone to talk to. Just then, a boy named Aman walked over and asked, “Would you like to join us?” Rohan’s face lit up with a smile, and he quickly agreed. From that day on, Rohan and Aman became close friends. They studied together, played cricket after school, and shared their lunch boxes. One day, Rohan forgot his homework and was worried the teacher would scold him. Aman encouraged him, saying, “Don’t worry, just tell the truth.” Rohan followed his advice, and the teacher appreciated his honesty. Rohan realised that true friends not only share fun times but also guide us to do the right thing. Friendship, Rohan learned, is not about having many friends, but about having someone who cares, supports, and helps us become better people.
